ANNALS OF DYSLEXIA

Volume 50 2000

Contents

Foreword vii

The 1999 Samuel T. Orton Award
"Now that the Battle's Over . . ."
Informal Remarks by Howard Gardner on the Occasion of His Receipt of the Samuel T. Orton Award by The International Dyslexia Association ix

Part I. A Review of Research on the Biological Basis of Dyslexia
The Neural Basis of Developmental Dyslexia
Thomas J. Zeffiro and Guinevere Eden 1

Part II. Intervention Issues
Schools as Host Environments: Toward a School-Wide Reading Improvement Model
Edward J. Kame'enui, Deborah C. Simmons, and Michael D. Coyne 31
Modeling the Response of Normally Achieving and At-Risk First Grade Children to Word Reading Instruction
Donald L. Compton 53

Part III. Language Development and Reading Disabilities
Do Late-Talking Toddlers Turn Out to Have Language and Reading Outcomes a Decade Later?
Leslie Rescorla 31
Is Dyslexia a Form of Specific Language Impairment? A Comparison of Dyslexia and Language Impaired Children as Adolescents
Nata K. Goulandris, Margaret J. Snowling, and Ian Walker ..103

Part IV. Reading and Foreign Language Learning
Individual Differences in Word Recognition Skills of ESL Children
Esther Geva, Zoreh Yaghoubzadeh, and Barbara Schuster 121
Dyslexia and Learning a Foreign Language: A Personal Experience
Charlann S. Simon 155
Foreign Language Learning, Hyperlexia, and Early Word Recognition
Richard L. Sparks and Marjorie Artzer 189

Part V. Reading Disabilities in Other Languages

Teachers' Skill Ratings of Children with Learning Disabilities: A Comparison of the United States and Japan
Charles Haynes, Pamela Hook, Paul Macaruso, Etsuko Muta, Yoichi Hayashi, Junko Kato, and Tokuko Sasaki 213

Exploring Reading-Spelling Connection as Locus of Dyslexia in Chinese
Che Kan Leong, Pui-Wan Cheng, and Catherine C. C. Lam ... 239

Guidelines for Contributors 261

Index 267